

Type Two: The Giver

Type Determination

Connected Types

Wing	Perfectionist 1
Wing	Performer 3
Security Type	Romantic 4
Stress Type	Protector 8

Non-connected Types

Most Common Look-alike Types	Epicure 7
	Mediator 9

Probability of Types

Types to consider given that Giver was your first choice
65%	Giver 2
8%	Epicure 7
8%	Mediator 9
7%	Romantic 4
5%	Perfectionist 1

Adjectives Describing the Type

Caring, helpful, supportive, relationship-oriented, tuned to others' feelings, optimistic, generous, likable, nurturing, advice giving, and responsible, but also prideful, intrusive, dramatic, often unable to say no, indirect regarding own needs, and over-accommodating.

If the Giver paragraph was your first choice, there is a 65 percent probability that this is your type. Read the Giver Type Description pages that follow to see if they accurately describe your personality. These pages can also help you gain insight into how you perceive the world and what you can do to enhance your personal development.

If you are not certain that the description of the Giver type fits you, then consider your second and third paragraph choices and the other probable types identified on the facing page. Compare these types to the Giver by reviewing the Type Description pages for your other likely possibilities. Also consider the myths about type and the key adjectives for your likely types.

Whether you are ready to confirm your choice of type, or are still unsure, turn to the Type Discriminator pages beginning on page 56. These pages identify the characteristics that distinguish each type from every other type.

Myths About the Type

It is often thought that Twos just give to get and underneath are very needy. In fact, Twos often give generously and only appear extra-needy because they repress so much need and desire, making them appear extra "thirsty" or needy.